It is just in its place dear mother,
He was 'under the Flag' you know. es, under the 'red, white and blue, The youngest, the cherished, the brave, Left his home with your blessing, Mother, The Flag of his country to save. And now when the children call For the Fing that is hung so high, To wave as they climb on the fence O'er some lone 'boy in blue' passing by,

I think of the time, dear mother, When we sat at our table that day, A messenger came to the door And hasted so quickly away— We all know the rest, dear Mother, How a white face spoke volumes of wee, How a strong frame shook as it bowed, How the life-blood ebbed fearfully low—

But, Mother, God carried you through The dark waters that flooded your soul, And though the winds beat, and waves roare His power did the tempest control. And now when you come to our home You will see that dear face on the wall, But, Mother, 'twill lighten your woe When you look at its glorious pall.
